Prekindergarten Students Learn About Germ Prevention from Pioneer Tech Nursing Students

Pioneer Technology Center nurses Chantelle Johnson and Ashleigh Hull recently came to Washington Prekindergarten Center to work with each student to show them how to wash their hands correctly to prevent the spread of germs. Students Blaze Queen and Eli Wright are shown in the picture practicing what they learned.

Hand washing is the single most effective way to prevent the spread of germs. Clean hands can stop germs from spreading from one person to another and throughout an entire community.
